

A Lady's Heart and Soul. My Life as a colored, Negro, Black, African American, is not a romantic love story, instead, this is a historical biography about a lady of color, who overcomes a mountain of adversity. But it is a story about never giving up on love and happiness and your dreams. And, this is not a book of instructions on how to live your life, neither is it a self-help book on how to achieve happiness. Rather, unequivocally, this is a story of inspiration and courage, love, and the will to succeed. Readers travel with Annie, as she recalls her turbulent youth, a time, where people of color were forced to live under the strict laws of Jim Crow in a her small town of Oklahoma. Her taboo relationship with the enemy, a white boy. We follow her journey through her uncertain adult years. Readers will be amazed with her challenging and accomplishments. Annie, searches deep into her soul to find the moral courage—the self-discipline—for a searching imagination, and a yearning for happiness and love. And Annie, is determined to triumph in spite of numerous tragedies, hideous racism, and personal heartbreaks. She uses failure as her mentor—and her trials-and-tribulations, becomes an instrument for her motivation—to obtain her life-goals, while not allowing her gender nor her race to dictate what she should be, and what she does with her life-time goals, in spite of numerous setbacks. You will root and cheer for this lady to succeed until the very end. And you will cross your fingers, with the hope that Annie will succeed and find true-love and happiness, and obtain her goals. This book is a story that every person should read, whether you are feeling helpless, short-changed in life, or full of love, you will be uplifted with this biography.
